

DRAW YOUR PARTNER

Choose a partner and take turns drawing pictures of each other. First one of you sits still while being drawn by your friend - then you draw while your friend sits still.

Look very carefully at your friend, observe the details, and draw what you see. Keep checking to make sure you are drawing what your friend really looks like. If you see a tiny mark on their nose, draw it. If there is a wrinkle near their eye, draw it. If their nose is bigger on one side, draw it that way. Keep looking.

Write the name of the person you drew and "drawn by ____" (your name) on your picture.

Allow plenty of time so that everyone can complete their drawings. Then tape each drawing on the wall or set them all out on the floor and look at them.

Can you recognise your friends from their drawings?

What does each drawing say about the character of the person? Does one person look shy? or scared? or surprised? or thoughtful? or content? or discontent?
